UNELE CONSIDERAȚII PRIVITOARE LA IDENTIFICAREA CRIMINALISTICĂ CU AJUTORUL ADN MITOCONDRIAL

dr.Adrian Iacob<sup>1</sup>
Aida-Ionela Gafița<sup>2</sup>

Abstract

The beginnings of forensics is strongly related with legal medicine. The necessity of solving some problems of identification of the person, the body and the harmful object has later determined the creation of some specific forensics methods. Judiciary genetics has an important role regarding the forensics identification, offering results with a great potential. Because of its importance, DNA was also named genetic mark. With the new discoveries in the domain of genetics, there are elaborated new ways of forensics identification, such as mitochondrial DNA.

GESTIONAREA RISCURILOR ÎN CADRUL STRUCTURII ORGANIZAȚIONALE

Abstract

Any activity deployed within an organizational structure is exposed to risk. Risk is an ordinary and habitual “partner” of any activity deployment and has direct impacts on the outcome of that particular activity. Thus, any manager must assess the risks that might occur during activity deployment and take the necessary precautions to mitigate or eliminate them. This activity is known as risk management. Risk management is a planned and organized activity intertwined with and subordinated to the general management. It is based on three distinct components integrated within its own system as well as the within the general management system: operations management, management of essential activities, and logistics support. Each of these components carries common functionalities as well as elements specific to risk management with organizational responsibilities of control, supervision or intervention, in case of unwanted occurrences, in order to alleviate the effects and consequences of their destructive factors.

ASPECTE PRIVIND IMPORTANȚA REZIDURILOR TRAGERII ÎN CADRUL CERCETĂRII LA FAȚA LOCULUI

Pop Alin<sup>2</sup>

Abstract:

Gunshot residue results from the discharge of a firearm. This includes primer, powder, and/or projectile material and products of their combustion. The residue that can be deposited on the hands of a shooter is usually the result of gases or particles escaping through openings in the weapon (such as the cylinder area of a revolver) or leaving the end of a barrel. The actual amount of residue on the hands varies with the type of weapon, ammunition, and conditions of discharge. The analysis of gunshot residue from the hands of a shooter detects primarily trace amounts of primer residue.

CARACTERISTICILE CRIMINOLOGICE ALE INFRAȚIUNILOR SĂVÂRȘITE CU VIOLENȚĂ

Melicianu-Vicu Sorin
Melicianu Marius

Abstract

Understanding the thought patterns and motivations of people who commit violent crimes is a somewhat controversial and unresolved issue. Criminal psychology attempts to understand the motives of all unlawful activities. This can extend to something as simple as littering--but more interestingly, criminal psychologists have attempted to understand and profile those personalities that are truly dangerous such as serial killers and other violent criminal offenders.

Abstract:

The Internet is the world's largest collection of networks that reaches universities, government labs, commercial enterprises, and military installations in many countries. Nowadays, along with the convenience and easy access to information, come new risks. The number of the attacks and the frauds on the Internet is increasing fast. Like in the case of the real fraud, the investigator must consider the potential risk of the verifications such as: the alteration of the crime scene, the destruction of the important evidences or leaving behind remains which could alert the criminal.
